

GRADE CROSSING ON LOWELL PARK ROAD IS TO BE WIDENED

COMMISSIONER OF HIGHWAYS REACHED AGREEMENT WITH I. C. R. R. CO.

WILL ALSO EXTEND APPROACHES

Railroad Officials Agree To Haul the Material and To Plank Crossing.

Commissioner of Highways James Penny has announced the successful termination of his efforts to secure the aid of the I. C. railroad officials in widening the grade crossing on the Lowell Park road. Sunday's collision between automobiles driven by Jas. Schrock of this city and George Griswold of Rockford was immediately called to the attention of the proper railroad officials by Mr. Penny and yesterday, after a conference between the I. C. superintendent, the commissioner and Co. Supt. Neighbor, the railroad company agreed to haul material to the crossing, making the roadway 30 feet wide and plank between the tracks, if the township would agree to widen the road at that point and extend the grade approaches to the tracks. Mr. Penny agreed so quickly the railroad men had no chance to ask any further stipulations and the deal was closed. The work will start as soon as the filling material can be shipped to Dixon.

Is Needed Improvement.
The news that the crossing is to be widened will be greatly appreciated by the hundreds of people who use the Lowell Park road. The crossing has always been a dangerous one, not so much from approaching train, but because of the inability of drivers to see vehicles approaching from the other side and because of extreme narrowness of the roadway over the tracks. The extension of the grade on either side of the tracks, as planned by the commissioner, will make it unnecessary for drivers to approach the crossing so swiftly, and widening of the roadway will allow vehicles to remain on their proper side of the road thus alleviating danger of collision with an approaching conveyance.

Petrograd, July 18—Heavy fighting continues in the region of Novika and Kalusz in eastern Galicia, one war office announced today. The Russians were driven from a height in this region but afterward recaptured it.

Gen. Korniloff's armies in eastern Galicia have been held up for a time by heavy contingents of German reserves stiffening the Austrian defense along the river Lomnica.

The holding of this river line is vital to the safety of the Teutonic positions.

Meanwhile there is notable activity along the Franco-Belgian front. The French carried out a successful counter attack in the vicinity of Hill 204 in the Verdun front beyond the original line and drove nearly two-thirds of a mile into the German line from Avenue Wood to west of Hill 304. The new ground is being firmly held.

On the British front there is pronounced aerial activity and a notable amount of heavy artillery work, particularly in Belgium.

DO NOT TELEPHONE FOR DRAFT NUMBER, IS LAZY MAN'S WAY

REGISTRANTS CAN GET NUMBER BY EXAMINING LEE CO. LIST.

AT SHERIFF PHILLIPS OFFICE

Every Man Who Registered Should Be Sure of Serial Number.

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
Washington, July 18—Although complete reports from seven states were still lacking today, Provost Marshal General Crowder began final preparations for the national army lottery.

The machinery for the lottery has been arranged and the only points undecided are the exact place in Washington where the drawing will occur and the date.

The government will be ready for the drawing as soon as the last state has reported.

Although the names of the registrants of Lee county for the new national army were published in the Telegraph, together with their serial number, there are many men in the county who are subject to draft, to start Friday or Saturday, who do not know their numbers.

It is imperative that each man know his number so he will know the order in which he has been drawn, and in which he must report to the exemption board at its office in the court house.

Don't Call For Number.

The following instructions to registrants are timely, as the drawing will soon begin:

Don't call on the telephone for your serial number. That is a lazy man's way. It is not the method that makes good soldiers. All kinds of errors can creep in. Figures may be transposed in the transmission or in the receiving and you may get another man's number.

Go to the sheriff's office and look over the list. It hangs there in plain sight and open to the public at all times the office is open. Pick out your number and assure yourself that you have it right.

Take a personal interest in the matter. It will do you good to go to headquarters and mingle with the others who are looking for their numbers, and it will give you more of the real spirit of the occasion.

Velie Owners Figure the Big Saving Their Cars Make

MANY Velie customers were recently asked this question. Do you figure your Velie as part of your every day equipment or as a luxury? The replies came from business men, merchants, farmers—men in all lines of work. Without exception they voted their Velie cars a time saver, a health promoter and a money saver paying a big return on the investment. Their replies are summarized in this: It would mean a big loss to go back to the railroad and street cars for daily trips and give up the economy and benefits of outdoor travel.

Velie values mean the largest return on the investment. Its long service—its sturdy construction—its swift, sure, smooth performance—its wonderful records for being always on the job, are due to such features as the Velie Continental motor—Timken axles, front and rear—multiple disc clutch—push button starter—automatic ignition. An extra convenience and comfort come from its soft underslung springs—deep-tufted genuine leather upholstery—long and roomy body, with its famous lasting Velie finish. Eight body styles—Touring Cars, Touring Sedan, Four Passenger Roadster, Coupe, etc. Better see the nearest Velie dealer about early delivery.

FUNNELS TO THE ENEMY

The Germans, before America entered the war, must often have laughed at England and France. Since we entered the war they must often have laughed at us. For in Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland they have had perfect funnels through which our products have poured into Germany rendering of no avail part of the British sea blockade of German ports and discounting in part our newly declared hostility to the country of the Kaiser.

Some things Germany needed to keep it from starvation, to keep up its munitions supply, clothe its troops, have been obtained from this country through neutral funnels.

Even casual study of the exports of this country to the neutrals closes to Germany will reveal the facts with startling clearness. For instance Denmark in 1913 took 415,479 bushels of our wheat and in 1915 2,754,746 — almost seven times as much. Holland took 14,832,000 in 1913 and in 1915 took 31,551,992—more than double.

Switzerland took 108,515 bushels of our rye in 1913. In 1916 she took 2,047,562—nearly 20 times as much.

In 1913 Holland took 6788 pounds of brass in bars, plates and sheets. In 1916 it took 1,950,943—over 250 times as much.

In 1913 Sweden took 9,080,914 pounds of copper. In 1915 she took 24,545,504—nearly four times as much.

In 1913 Switzerland took 2699 pounds of leather. In 1916 she took 1,553,936 and all other neutrals took similar quantities.

In 1913 Norway took $4743 worth of miscellaneous chemicals. In 1916 she took $350,806 worth.

The figures cited for the selected individual countries are typical of all neutrals. Allowing for the fact that these countries were cut off from Russian and Argentine wheat, from Russian leather, from German chemicals and from European brass and copper supplies, allowing for the fact that they, therefore, turned to America to make up the deficit—there still remains so large an increase in their imports as to preclude belief that all they bought in the past three years has been for home consumption.

The conviction will not down that they acted as purchasing agents for Germany.

To that extent these neutrals were not neutral. They were assistants to Germany. They helped her circumvent the blockade. They sneaked to her products that were contraband of war. They made use of the war by piling up their war profits.

And that is where the exports council appointed by President Wilson under the espionage bill will be of great service to the cause of America and her allies against Germany. Its first job will be to stop the leak to the enemy.

GRIND IN U. S. NAVY.

The "new democracy" is invading the American navy. Midshipmen, future navy officers, are being sent to sea to get practical experience. Captain Eberle, superintendent of the Annapolis naval academy, has sent 730 midshipmen out to receive practical experience.

They're scattered among a score or more of battleships, torpedo boat destroyers and cruisers, shoveling coal, swabbing decks, practicing with the guns and doing exactly what thousands of enlisted men are doing.

"The first essential in turning out a good officer is to instill in him an appreciation of the services of the men who will be under him," Captain Eberle said.

So, carrying out Capt. Eberle's theory of democracy, the midshipmen this summer will acquire first hand, accurate knowledge as to how hard it is to keep the furnaces aboard ship supplied with coal or just how much muscle it takes to keep the ship spick and span.

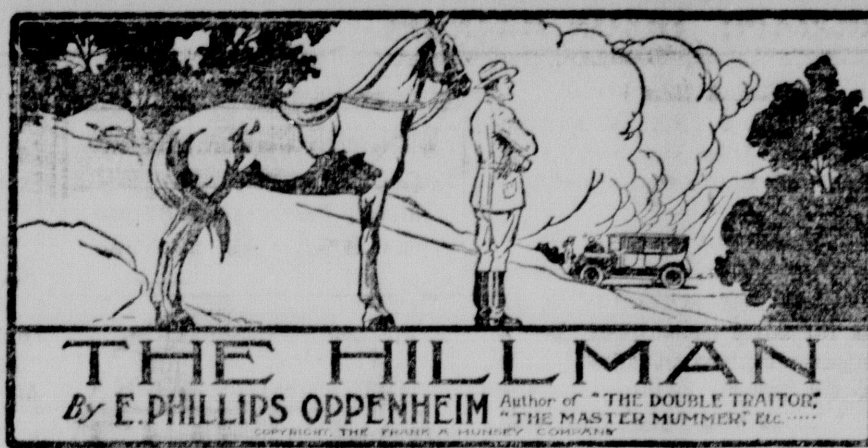

Only from 38 to 45 of the applicants pass the entrance examinations. The rest have to go back home.

Once in the academy, a boy has to keep himself on edge, mentally, to stick in. Six hundred and twenty-five boys were admitted to the academy last October and but 103 of them failed in the February examinations and were dropped from the rolls. Following the law of averages it is doubtful if 500 of the original 625 members of the class will stick through to the finish.

"The public often asks how we turn out such fine specimens of manhood," said Capt. Eberle. "It's done by giving each young man individual attention. We make a 'physical chart' of every man in the academy and once a month he is examined to see how much each part of his body has developed. If certain parts aren't coming along satisfactorily we prescribe exercises to remedy the defect."

So careful are the authorities of the physical well-being of the midshipmen that none is allowed even to smoke until his fourth year at the academy. Use of alcoholic liquors in any form means instant dismissal.

Eleven months in every year the midshipman is studying or going thru strenuous physical exercises. Each September, after he has been at the academy a year, he can go home to visit his folks.

THE HILLMAN
By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—On a trip through the English Cumberland country the breakdown of her automobile forces Louise Maudsl, a famous London actress, to spend the night at the farm home of John and Stephen Strangeway.

CHAPTER II.—At dinner Louise discovers that the brothers are woman-hating recluses.

CHAPTER III.—Next morning she discovers that John, the younger brother, has recently come into a large fortune. In company with him she explores the farm.

CHAPTER IV.—In a talk with him she is disturbed by his rigid moral principles and finds that his wealth has created no desire for any other life than the simple one he is leading. She tells him her name and that she is the friend of the prince of Seyre, a rich and disreputable neighbor.

CHAPTER V.—Three months later, unable to rid himself of the memory of the actress and in spite of his brother's protests, John goes to London.

CHAPTER VI.—He finds Louise engaged in the rehearsal of a new play, meets her friends and is entertained at luncheon with her by the prince.

CHAPTER VII.—John drives Sophie home and she gives him friendly advice about love and life in London. The prince and Louise postpone a little journey they had arranged for.

CHAPTER VIII.—Louise and her friend Sophie take John out for a Bohemian night, introducing him to London life.

CHAPTER IX.—The prince takes John under his social care. Graillet, the aristocratic valet, tells John that both the prince and John love her and that the prince will be a dangerous enemy to his rival.

CHAPTER X.

During the remainder of that afternoon and evening John was oppressed by a vague sense of the splendor of his surroundings and his companion's mysterious capacity for achieving impossibilities. Their visits to the tailors, the shirtmakers, the hosiers and the bootmakers almost resembled a royal progress. All difficulties were waived aside. That night he dined, clothed like other men from head to foot, in the lofty dining room of one of the most exclusive clubs in London. The prince proved an agreeable if somewhat reticent companion. He introduced John to many well-known people, always with that little note of personal interest in his few words of presentation which gave a certain significance to the ceremony.

From the club, where the question of John's proposed membership, the prince acting as his sponsor, was favorably discussed with several members of the committee, they drove to Covent Garden, and for the first time in his life John entered the famous opera house. The prince, preceded by an attendant, led the way to a box upon the second tier. A woman turned her head as they entered and stretched out her hand, which the prince raised to his lips.

"You see, I have taken you at your word, Eugene," she remarked. "You give me double pleasure, dear lady," the prince declared. "Not only is it a joy to be your host, but you give me also the opportunity of presenting to you my friend, John Strangeway. Strangeway, this is my very distant relative and very dear friend, Lady Hilda Mulloch."

Lady Hilda smiled graciously at John. She was apparently of a little less than middle age, with dark bands of chestnut hair surmounted by a tiara. Her face was the face of a clever and still beautiful woman; her figure slender and dignified; her voice low and delightful.

"Are you paying your nightly homage to Calavera, Mr. Strangeway, or are you only an occasional visitor?" she asked.

"This is my first visit of any sort to Covent Garden," John told her. She looked at him with as much surprise as good breeding permitted. John, who had not as yet sat down, seemed almost preternaturally tall in that small box, with its low ceiling. He was looking around the house with the enthusiasm of a boy. Lady Hilda glanced away from him toward the prince, and smiled; then she looked back at John. There was something like admiration in her face.

"Do you live abroad?" she asked. John shook his head. "I live in Cumberland," he said. "Many people here seem to think that that is the same thing. My brother and I have a farm there."

"But you visit London occasionally, surely?" "I have not been in London," John told her, "since I passed through it on my way home from Oxford, eight years ago."

"I have never heard anything so extraordinary in my life!" the woman declared frankly. "Is it the prince who has induced you to break out of your seclusion?"

"Our young friend," the prince explained, "finds himself suddenly in altered circumstances. He has been left a large fortune, and has come to spend it. Incidentally, I hope, he has come to see something more of your sex than is possible among his mountain wilds. He has come, in short, to look a little way into life."

Lady Hilda leaned back in her chair. "How romantic!" "How romantic!" John assured her. "I don't suppose I shall stay very long in London. I want just to try it for a time."

She looked at him almost wistfully. She was a woman with brains; a woman, an notorious for the freedom of her life, for her intellectual gifts, for her almost brutal disregard of the conventions of her class. The psychological interest of John Strangeway's situation appealed to her powerfully. Besides, she had a weakness for handsome men.

"At any rate," said Lady Hilda, "I am glad to think that I shall be able to watch you when you see Calavera in her dances for your first time."

The curtain rang up upon one of the most gorgeous and sensuous of the Russian ballets. John, who by their joint insistence was occupying the front chair in the box, leaned forward in his place, his eyes steadfastly fixed upon the stage. Both the prince and Lady Hilda, in the background, although they occasionally glanced at the performance, devoted most of their attention to watching him.

As the story progressed and the music grew in passion and voluptuousness, they distinctly saw his almost militant protest. They saw the knitting of his firm mouth and the slight contraction of his eyebrows. The prince and his friend exchanged glances. She drew her chair a little farther back, and he followed her example.

"Where did you find anything so wonderful as this?" she murmured. "Lost among the hills of Cumberland," the prince replied. "I have an estate up there—in fact, he and I are joint lords of the manor of the village in which he has lived."

"And you?" she whispered, glancing at John to be sure that she was not overheard. "Where do you come in? As educator of the young? I don't seem to see you in that role!"

A very rare and by no means pleasant smile twisted the corners of his lips for a moment.

"It is a long story."

"Can I be brought in?" she asked. He nodded.

"It rests with you. It would suit my plans."

She toyed with her fan for a moment, looked restlessly at the stage and back again at John. Then she rose from her place and stood before the lookingglass. From the greater obscurity of the box she motioned to the prince.

John remained entirely heedless of their movements. His eyes were still riveted upon the stage, fascinated with the wonderful coloring, the realization of a new art.

"You and I," Lady Hilda whispered, "do not need to play about with the truth, Eugene. What are you doing this for?"

"The fildest whim," the prince assured her quietly. "Look at him. Think for a moment of his position—absolutely without experience, entirely ignorant about women, with a fortune one, only dreams of, and probably the handsomest animal in London. What is going to become of him?"

"I think I understand a little," she confessed.

"I think you do," the prince assented. "He has views, this young man. It is my humor to see them dissipated. The modern Sir Galahad always irritated me a little."

She shrugged her shoulders. "They'll never give him a chance, those women," she said. "Much better hand him over to me."

The prince smiled enigmatically, and Lady Hilda returned to her seat. John was still leaning forward with his eyes fixed upon Calavera, who was dancing alone now. The ballet was drawing toward the end. The music had reached its climax of wild and passionate sensuousness, dominated and inspired by the woman whose every movement and every glance seemed part of some occult, dimly understood language.

"Well?" the prince asked. "John shook his head."

"I don't know," he answered.

"Neither does anyone else," Lady Hilda said. "Don't try to analyze your impressions for our benefit, Mr. Strangeway. I am exactly in your position. Even to us hardened men and women of the world, this Russian music came as a surprise. There were parts of it you did not like, though, weren't there?"

"There were parts of it I hated," John agreed. "There were passages that seemed to him at discord in every sense of the word."

She nodded sympathetically. They were on their way down the broad staircase.

"I wonder," she murmured, "whether I am going to be asked out to supper?"

"Alas, not tonight, dear lady," the prince regretted. "I am having a few friends at Seyre House."

She shot a glance at him and shrugged her shoulders. She was evidently displeased.

"How much too bad!" she exclaimed. "I am not at all sure that it is right of you to invite Mr. Strangeway to one of your orgies. A respectable little supper at the Carlton, and a cigarette in my library afterward, would have been a great deal better for both of you—certainly for Mr. Strangeway. I think I shall run away with him, as it is!" The prince shrugged his shoulders. "It is unfortunate," he sighed, "but we are both engaged. If you will give us the opportunity some other evening—"

"I am not at all sure that I shall have anything more to do with you, Eugene," she declared. "You are not behaving nicely. Will you come and see me while you are in town. Mr. Strangeway?" she added, turning to John.

"I should like to very much," he replied. "I think," he added, a little hesitatingly, "that I have read one of your books of travel. It is very interesting to meet you."

"So my fame has really reached Cumberland!" she laughed. "You must come and talk to me one afternoon quite soon. Will you?"

"I will come with pleasure," John promised.

They stood for a few moments in the crowded vestibule until Lady Hilda Mulloch's car was called. The prince stood back, allowing John to escort her to the door. She detained him for a moment after she had taken her seat, and leaned out of the window, her fingers still in his hand.

"Be careful!" she whispered. "The prince's supper parties are just a little—shall I say brutal? There are better things if one waits!"

United States Has No "Penny." The habit of calling the one-cent piece of our American coinage a "penny" is utterly without foundation or excuse. We have no penny in our coinage. At one time half-cent pieces were coined but now the unit is one cent, the hundredth part of a dollar.

Amsterdam, July 18.—In a lengthy apology published by the Catholic center party of Germany for the action of Deputy Mathias Erzberger in attacking the pan-Germans and the submarine campaign are the following sentences:

"Certainly our fronts stand unshakable. Our strongest offensive force, the U-boats, injures England immeasurably. Nevertheless no end is to be foreseen at this moment. Hope has arisen that the end of the war might be brought about by midsummer through the U-boats. Expectations were aroused which were not realized. This statement, however, implies no doubt in the efficiency of the U-boats. It has occurred to me to suggest the stoppage of submarine warfare."

Senate Starts Move to Get 1,000,000 Draft Eligibles.

TREATY SHIELDS 2 NATIONALS

Japanese and Italians in United States Cannot Be Compelled to Render Service Under Pact — British, French and Russians Subject to Laws of United States.

Washington, July 18.—Final details of the draft were completed at a conference between Secretary of War Baker and Provost Marshal General Enoch Crowder.

General Crowder submitted to the secretary his final draft of the regulations for the actual drawing. The secretary approved them and they immediately were forwarded to the government printing office. Thousands of copies are now being run off the presses.

The rule, printed in pamphlet form, will be distributed by mail throughout the country. As it will be impossible for them to reach all districts before the draft, which will be held before the end of the week, copies will be furnished to the press immediately subject to release on the day of the draft.

Secretary Baker has had a final conference with President Wilson and turned over to him the draft regulations. They will be made the subject of a proclamation by the President.

Dissatisfaction in the senate over the state draft quotas is having the effect in halting the operation of the law.

May Get Foreign Slackers.

Foreign slackers in this country should fear that after all they will be sent to the trenches. Two measures aimed at them were framed in the senate. One was actually introduced.

Senator Chamberlain has a resolution providing that all citizens of foreign countries who have been in this country more than a year and are of draftable age shall be liable. Exemptions are, of course, alien enemies, and also those men who declare their intention to become citizens. In addition, citizens of countries which have treaties forbidding such action will be exempted. The only two large nations which have such treaties are Italy and Japan.

The aliens in this country who would be made subject to draft would be given thirty days to return to their own lands, where naturally they might again be subject to draft.

The McCumber resolution alleges that it is "most unjust" to ask and require the American people to sacrifice men, when aliens "enjoy in this country the special and wonderful industrial opportunities which this war affords them and are wholly relieved from service or sacrifice."

The two resolutions are designed entirely to catch the simon-pure slackers. They propose in part to readjust the population of states for a foundation for the draft quota. Drafting aliens may add 1,000,000 men. On June 1 there were some 1,230,000 aliens in this country exclusive of alien enemies.

Would Have 1,000,000 Eligibles.

It is estimated that the adoption of the Chamberlain resolution would add more than 1,000,000 men liable to the draft. The June 5 registration showed 1,239,865 aliens other than Germans between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-one in the United States.

Draft Most Likely Saturday.

Reports indicate that all the states will have finished their work before Thursday. This opened the possibility of the draft being set for Friday, but the best indications are that the date would remain set for Saturday.

It became increasingly evident that exemptions will be few and far between. The local boards will take up only questions of physical fitness and dependency. The appellate boards, located in sufficiently large districts to remove them from danger of local influence, being brought to bear, will take up all other claims.

A man claiming exemption for industrial reasons will have two things to prove:

First—That he is engaged in work vitally necessary to the prosecution of the war or to the well-being of the government.

Two—That he himself is a val factor in carrying on the work.

BELLE OF IOWA TOWN HUNTED

"Dimples" Evans Disappears After Arrival at Chicago to Seek Fortune.

Chicago, July 18.—Hate ("Dimples") Evans, the belle of Emmetsburg, Iowa, is "lost, strayed or stolen" somewhere in Chicago. "Dimples" had never ventured farther from home than Sioux City until Feb. 22, when she decided to celebrate Washington's birthday by coming to Chicago and opening a dressmaking establishment.

When she arrived here Feb. 23 "Dimples" wrote her brother Albert: "Believe me, Chi has el Sioux City skinned a country block! Nothing has been heard of 'Dimples' since Albert received the blissful etc. And now 'Dimples' brother, sister and mother have appealed to the Chicago police to find the 'Queen of Emmetsburg,' whose innocence, they fear, has led her into the lurid perils of the big city.
